

Revision Tips for A/L Exam

Collaborate with Classmates

Feeling crushed under the weight of your A-level coursework? Remember the other students in your class are feeling the same, so, why not divide the work up between some of your trustworthy classmates to abate the exam stress? Not only will this bring down the workload you have, it will also open your eyes to a different perspective on a topic that the other students may have picked up on.

Interacting with the other students both in person and online also contributes to your communication skills. This is a precious asset which you will benefit from all your life, so never underestimate how essential effective communication can be.
